Description:

This 1971 Honda CB750 is finished in green and is powered by an overbored 736cc inline-four paired with a five-speed transmission. The fuel tank and side panels are finished in green, and the bike features a two-up seat upholstered in black vinyl with a passenger grab strap. The frame was reportedly repaired and refinished during current ownership, and additional details include chrome fenders, grab bar, and mirrors in addition to headlight ears, passenger footpegs, reflectors, center and side stands, and a replacement headlight lens and chain guard.

The 19" front and 18" rear wire-spoke wheels wear Metzler Sportec tires. Suspension consists of a conventional fork with gaiters as well as dual shocks mounted to the swingarm, and braking is handled by a front disc and a rear drum. The front brake components were recently replaced.

A chrome handlebar fronts replacement instrumentation consisting of a Nippon Denso 150-mph speedometer, a tachometer, and four warning lights. An aftermarket oil pressure gauge has been fitted on the right side cover. The five-digit odometer shows 201 miles, and total mileage is unknown. The 736cc inline-four was reportedly overbored and rebuilt during current ownership and is equipped with four Keihin carburetors, Charlie's Place electronic ignition, and a four-into-four exhaust system with HM341 mufflers. Power is sent to the rear wheel through a five-speed transmission and a drive chain.
